Ростов-на-Дону, 2014

Аннотация

Данная работа предназначена для контроля знаний студентов 1 курса заочной формы обучения в 1 и 2 семестрах по дисциплине «Иностранный язык - английский».

Методические указания определяют основные направления самостоятельной работы студентов, содержат требования к зачету, список необходимой литературы, рекомендации по выбору нужного варианта и оформлению контрольных работ № 1, 2, 3, 4.

Контрольные задания позволяют развить у студентов навыки и умения использования английской лексики и грамматики, чтения и перевода англоязычной литературы учебно-бытовой, научно-популярной и страноведческой тематики.

At present the Globe people speak almost 5000 various languages: some of them being spoken by millions, others – only by hundreds. Inside this number 13 languages are distinguished as Great ones according to the number of natural speakers. The most widespread language in the world is Chinese. About one billion people speak English (every sixth person). One of the most expressive, rich and widespread languages is Russian. More than 400 million people in various countries speak this language today. The ratio of the rest Great languages is as follows (in millions): Hindi and Urdu -350, Spanish -340, Indonesian – 210, Arabian – 200, Bengali – 180, Portuguese -150, Japanese -120, German- 100, French – 95, Italian – 75.

Taking into consideration the distribution rate of several languages including the total number of speakers and states using these languages, the UN chose 6 languages as its official and working languages: Chinese, English, Russian, Spanish, French and Arabian. English occupies a special place among them.

Nowadays it is simply essential for people of good will all over the world to know and speak several or at least one foreign language. It is important not only for their personal use but also for better un-

Great Britain, the United States of America, Canada, Australia, Ireland and New Zealand are large English-speaking countries. They are situated in various parts of the Globe and differ in many ways. Each country has its own history, national holidays, traditions and customs. But they have a common language, English, the language of the people who left Britain to settle in new countries.

From the British Isles the English language spread all over the world, that's why we can say that Britain is the main English-speaking country the official name of which is the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. The country is situated on the British Islands and consists of England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. The capital of the state is London. The official languages are English, Welsh, Scottish and Gaelic. The country population is over 60 million.

The UK is a constitutional monarchy headed by the Queen whose power is limited by the British Parliament consisting of 2 Chambers: the House of Common and the House of Lords. The British Monarch appoints the leader of the party, having the majority in the House of Commons, as the country Prime Minister who is responsible for the policy conducted by the Parliament.

Britain is the country with old and rich cultural traditions and Every nation, big or small, has its own national flag. The flag's colours and symbolics have their own definite meaning. Being the symbol of the country, which it represents, each flag is an expression of human hopes and ideals. The state flags of various countries tell us a lot about their states' history, past and present of their people and often their future too. The state flags of various countries are represented in the United Nations Organization.

The UK national flag is known in the world today as the Union Jack. It was named so after the king Jacob, who united England, Scotland and Ireland and joined their flags into one to stop all the discords between these countries. During its history the flag changed several times. Finally, it was adopted in 1801. Nowadays it has 3 white and red crosses of St. George, St. Andrew and St. Patrick (traditional Patron Saints of England, Scotland and Ireland) on the dark blue field. The weave of the crosses symbolizes the country power and might.

The USA national flag is known as "Stars and Stripes". Thirteen horizontal white and red stripes mean the number of the original American states in the north and south, while fifty white stars on the dark blue field mean the number the today's American states.

(27) Britain is supposed to be the land of law and order.
(28) The British always display unity in a crisis and strong sense for the public order. To queue up is one of their customs. They are naturally polite and are never tired of saying "Sorry!" and "Thank you" They don't like showing off in their manners, speech and dress. They are realistic, prudent and careful in everything.

(29) Most people agree that Britons are rather conservative. They love familiar things and are very reluctant to any changes. Perhaps, there is no other nation in the world that so clings to the past as the Britons. They keep up their old customs, traditions and institutions which seem rather strange to many foreigners. The warders at the Tower of London in their funny flat hats, the Queen's levees, the Guard changing and many other customs and ceremonies are quite natural for them. They rooted in their minds and souls and harmoniously mix with their everyday life.

It is not easy to define clearly what the Americans are. Due to numerous migrations the USA is a country with a very diverse population and a lot of subcultures. That's why it would be a great mistake to think that Americans are all alike. However, as a nation, they have certain qualities, characteristics and values which are typical only for them.

(27)Americans are a self-centered nation. (28)They are little interested in history or in any other cultures. To win is the main feature of the American psychology. They are ready to compete with everybody, even with their own relatives and best friends.

(29)Unlike Englishmen, Americans like sociability. Their informality of speech, clothes and behavior is often astonishing. They can do any things, they like, and ask personal questions, while Englishmen think it to be ill-manners. By nature Americans are rather pushing, inventive, socially active, too talkative and a very mobile nation.

Canada resembles a garden where people of every race, creed and colour live. (27)Multiculturalism is an important feature of the Canadian society. And it is precisely for this reason that Canadian identity is very difficult to describe or explain.

Some people claim that Canadians lack their own national identity, that they don't differ much from Americans. And, to some extent, it is true. (28)Canadians seem very American. But they bristle when they are taken for Americans, because they have their own character and ideals.

Unlike Americans, Canadians are more open and curious. They display tendency toward non-violence and tolerance of others. (29)They are also warm-hearted and extremely courteous people. Canadians are more polite, when they are being rude, than Americans are, when they are being polite.
